Allen, Will

CPC Only

For over 20 years, William Allen has dedicated himself to advising his clients and addressing their specific legal needs. Starting his career with a small, Dayton-based boutique defense firm, Will has acquired experience on both sides of claims, which he finds invaluable in helping his clients. Whether he is dealing with insurance companies and adjusters pre-suit, their lawyers in court, or health insurers looking to be repaid out of a settlement or award, Will goes the extra mile to ensure his clients maximize their recovery.

Will's legal profession was seemingly pre-ordained. He is a fourth-generation attorney, still practicing with his father, Patrick, who was instrumental in his coming to the firm from the defense side. The tradition of providing sound legal advice to clients was founded well over 110 years ago when Will's great-grandfather, William A. Allen, first became an attorney. Will is only the latest in the Allen legal legacy which includes his great-grandfather, grandfather, uncle, and father.

Will's work experience pre-law was diverse. It included farm work, landscaping, construction labor, Kings Island grounds crew and retail, so he identifies with people who don't work behind a desk. He is respected by fellow plaintiff's attorneys, members of the judiciary and adversaries alike.

Will lives in Dayton with his family. He enjoys hunting, fishing and the outdoors.

Rickert, David

CPC Only Offers ZOOM Mediations

I have practiced in Dayton since my graduation from the University of Chicago Law School in 1978. Since that time, I have focused my practice on construction litigation, representing architects, engineers, and property owners in both residential and commercial construction projects. I have represented both Plaintiff and Defendants in general commercial litigation and have experience in Probate litigation, including a jury trial will contest matter in Montgomery County Probate Court last year. I have recently taken a 40-hour mediation certification course at Northwestern University's School of Professional Studies. I have also participated in mediation with a broad array of mediators and through them learned various styles of mediation.

Whelley, II, Thomas

CPC Only

With more than 30 years of litigation experience, Tom brings a communication-driven approach to provide clients with the counsel they need. He has litigated a variety of complex business cases, ranging from shareholder disputes to accounting malpractice to broker dealer actions. He also has a wealth of experience in product liability matters, having tried a variety of chemical exposure cases, as well as cases for industrial and marine products.

Understanding that litigation can be costly, Tom works with clients to develop strategies for finding resolutions short of the courtroom. He is experienced in negotiating clients through arbitration proceedings, and understands the importance of mediation in resolving disputes. By placing a premium on learning each client's operations and objectives, he is able to tailor his approach to fit their needs and help guide them to efficient, cost-effective resolutions. However, when litigation becomes necessary, he draws on his vast experience trying jury cases before state and federal courts to develop and implement a strategy best suited to each client's needs.

Also, Tom is a Harvard Law School trained mediator and an experienced neutral. He can assist you in that role to resolve your litigation disputes.

Tom's knowledge and experience in litigation isn't limited to the courtroom, as he teaches civil trial practice to law students at the University of Dayton, passing on his wealth of knowledge to help guide the next generation of litigators. He is also a board member of the Dayton Early College Academy, a unique charter school that serves underprivileged children in the Dayton area. Leveraging his experience in the courtroom with the perspectives gained through his outside efforts, Tom brings a skilled approach to providing clients the counsel and insight they need to find resolutions.
